

In the Picture

Birdies fly in for Letter from the Open Golf

reating and implementing a community arts-based project was to be one of the Society's activities for 2012, which was set to be such an exciting year for everyone - we had the Jubilee, the Olympics and the Open Golf Championship. But which event to choose for our project? We decided to go with the Golf and living in an area that is so important for marine and wetland bird life, it wasn't too difficult to come up with the It's a Birdie title.

Of course, the Open Golf is a vitally important event for the area in terms of revenue and kudos but what does it mean to the ordinary St Annes resident? We wanted to create a project that would involve adults and children for whom the golfing event might otherwise pass them by. Coming on the heels of last year's Mr Lowry in Lytham St Annes project, however, we knew we had a hard act to follow.

A small team was created to get the project off the ground. None of us had any experience of funding or organising an arts project of this scale. Securing the necessary finance was a lengthy process and during this anxious time our initial ideas morphed several times into an entirely different project from our original plans. With the backing of a £10,000 award from the Arts Council; £2,000 from Fylde Continued on page 7

Fylde DFAS Chair Hilary Alcock unveils Birdsworth

Local Strategic Partnership; £1,000 from NADFAS and £1,000 from Fylde DFAS, we were able to undertake three major projects with professional artists as well as organise a number of communitybased events.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds was an obvious partner and we were delighted to

our Chair

Well, here we are again at the start of another year in the life of Fylde DFAS. As I write this I am aware that our readership will contain some new members as well as those who joined midway through the 2011/12 season.

I thought it might be useful therefore to remind you briefly of what Fylde DFAS is about and its relationship with the National Association of Decorative and Fine Arts Societies.

We are affiliated to NADFAS which is a leading arts charity widely acknowledged for its valuable work in arts education and heritage conservation and are one of more than 350 societies worldwide with a membership of over 90,000 men and women.

As you will find out, we are a local provider of high quality and wide ranging lectures and we hope you like our newly designed Programme Card which tells you Continued on back page

Fylde Decorative and Fine Arts Society A Member Society of the National Association of Decorative and Fine Arts

Members pursue a mutual interest in the arts through lectures on a wide range of decorative and fine arts topics including art, sculpture, jewellery design architecture, garden design. Lectures are on the first Wednesday of every month at 2pm in the Hall of the St. Annes-on-Sea United Reformed Church, St. George's Road, Lytham St. Annes FY8 2AE. Chair: Hilary Alcock 01995 670563 Vice-Chair: Marie Riley 01253 713003

In the Picture

Lectures and other dates for your diary

See our website at www.fyldedfas.org.uk for further information on all our future events

Wed 7 November

Samuel Foote: Onelegged comedy super star of the 18th century stage

lan Kelly

the most notorious and bestloved man in Georgian London. A one-legged comedy superstar, he wrote a series of hit comedies for one-legged actors (for obvious reasons, not often revived). He was definitely the first celebrity impressionist be the founding father of the British sense of humour.

Thurs 15 November

Afternoon Tea with Joshia Wedgwood

Thurs 29 November

One Man Two Guvnors: Theatre trip onlays and a hundred

Wed 5 December

Merrily on High - The history of the English Christmas Carol

Peter Medhurst

Peter will trace the progress of the English Foote was carol through seven centuries of continuous development and reveals that behind many of the apparently unassuming seasonal songs lie some fascinating stories.

Wed 19 December Christmas Lunch

Wed 9 January 2013

Lost on the Titanic: and has some claim to The story of the Great Lligat, Spain, in 1962. Omar Binding

Dominic Riley When completed in

was the most elaborate and opulent binding ever created. It was embellished with over one thousand jewels, five thousand leather

1912, the Great Omar

leaf. It took a team of craftsmen over two and a half years to make. It went down square feet of gold with the Titanic. We hear the moving story of life after the Titanic tragedy and of one young man in particular, who decided to recreate the binding.

Wed 5 February

My Day with Salvador Dali

Peter gives an account

Peter Webb

of the fascinating day he spent with Salvador Dali at his house in This will lead to an examination of the extraordinary ideas present in his paintings which seem to illustrate many of Freud's theories in his Interpretation of Dreams, even though Freud himself found them difficult to

Friday 22 February

Special Interest Day: Pulling Pictures Apart

Alexandra Drysdale

Three lectures will offer a variety of stimulating and fun activities for everyone. To participate in each activity will involve pulling pictures apart into colour, light, form and subject matter. Your critical faculties will be stretched in all directions but by the end of the day you will be far more aware of the visual language that artists use. You do not need to be an art historian or artist to enjoy the day - just a love of art and a playful temperament.

Wednesday 6 March

Ruskin and the Pre-Raphaelites

Prof. Michael Wheeler

John Ruskin was England's most influential art critic.

launching his career with Modern Painters in which he argued that Turner was England's greatest landscape painter. Ruskin went on to support the Pre-Raphaelites and attack Whistler. Michael Wheeler, author of Ruskin's God and formerly founding Director of the Ruskin Centre at Lancaster University, investigates the professional and personal relationships between Ruskin and Millais, Rossetti and Holman Hunt. Kate Cartmell

The Lakes and Harewood among 2013 trips

Following the lecture John Ruskin and the Pre-Raphaelites next March, a day out is planned to the Lake District. First we will visit the Ruskin Museum which opened in Coniston in 1901 as a memorial to the man and a celebration of the area's heritage. The museum has an extensive Ruskin collection of paintings and artefacts and also has exhibits relating to lace, slate, geology, farming and Donald Campbell. After lunch we visit Brantwood, where Ruskin lived from 1872 to 1900. It is filled with many fine paintings, beautiful furniture and personal treasures and is one of the most perfectly situated houses in the Lake District.

In the Picture is edited by Marion Nuttall and published twice a year in March and October. Contact the Editor at inthepicture@iwcom.co.uk

In July we will be visiting Harewood House, the magnificent Yorkshire home of the Oueen's cousin, the Earl of Harewood. Nestling in landscaped grounds designed by 'Capability' Brown, this is one of the great treasure houses of England and is famed for its magnificent architecture and art collections. The house was built in 1772 and designed by the leading architect John Carr of York, who also designed Lytham Hall. It contains world class art collections including watercolours by Turner, who stayed at Harewood under the patronage of Edward Lascelles. There are family portraits by Gainsborough and Sir Ioshua Reynolds. Princess Mary, the Princess Jebusa Shannon Royal and Lord Harewood's mother, lived at Harewood from 1929 until her death in 1965 and there is plenty of royal memorabilia on display.

Mary, Princess Royal by James

I hope I have tempted you to come on both these excursions. Christine Cockburn

Page 3 In the Picture

Obituary: Stanley Warburton, truly a man of many parts

Artist, teacher, golfer, widely read and passionate about music, Stanley Warburton worked as an engineer and draughtsman — a man of many parts and skilled in all of them. He died on August 12 aged 93.

Stanley was born in Heywood, lived in Rochdale and retired to Lytham St. Annes. As a boy he was fascinated by his paternal grandfather's paintings, which adorned the walls of his grandmother's home. The Bury artist died the year Stanley was born but his work inspired the young Stanley to try his hand at painting.

He has said that when he was young he spent all his spare time painting, golfing and attending concerts. He also visited art galleries and JMW Turner's Liber Studiorum (Book of Studies) in Bury Art Gallery was a huge influence. Stanley grew to love the romantic landscapes of Turner and his contemporaries.

Although mainly self-taught, Stanley amassed an academic knowledge of the different techniques of many artists, being influenced in the early stages by Cezanne, Vlaminck, Stanley Spencer, the Nash brothers and Wilson Steer. However he had been advised by LS Lowry "not to read too much nor to see too many paintings by other artists but to retain his own vision".

But how could he not visit art exhibitions? From the bicentenary of the master's birth, Stanley became an expert on Turner. This is illustrated in the video "A walking conversation with Luke Casey following Turner's footsteps", which can be accessed by googling Stanley Warburton and clicking on to the heading Stanley Warburton in the Dales.

The Road to World's End by Stanley Warburton in the collection of the Learnington Spa Art Gallery & Museum

During his lifetime Stanley held many prestigious roles, for example President of the Lytham St Annes Art Society, Chairman of the Northern Branch of the Turner Society and Vice-President of the National Turner Society. He

What's on in the North West

Please note this feature is now published exclusively on our website, fyldedfas.org.uk, under the title Exhibitions, where information is regularly updated.

lectured regularly for many years at most of the North West art societies and one of his collectors tells the story of how Stanley followed the main speaker at the Athenaeum in London and gained the greater applause!

His great joy was to travel at home and abroad to sketch and paint but he also curated a few exhibitions, notably Turner and Dr. Whittaker at Towneley Hall, Burnley, in 1982 following which Stanley himself had a retrospective exhibition two years later. He currently has oil paintings in the Leamington Spa Art Gallery and watercolours in several North West public art galleries.

Stanley did, as advised by Lowry, find his own style which many of us saw earlier this year at the Fylde Art Gallery, Lytham in An Art Refined, where nearly seventy of his works were displayed, most of them kindly loaned by his collectors. The exhibition was Stanley's great pride and joy. He was thrilled to have had a last display of his life's work and to entertain his long standing friends from so many parts of the country, Lancashire, Yorkshire, Cornwall, Norfolk, Scotland and Wales. You can see a video of the exhibition's preview by googling Stanley Warburton and clicking on One Man Art Exhibition.

Fylde DFAS was proud and pleased when Stanley accepted an Honorary Membership in March of this year. Veronica McDonnell

From scary earth tremors to mindblowing art treasures, mixed with glorious sunshine and food, 40 members experienced it all during the Fylde DFAS six-day Italian trip in May. For art devotees and lovers of fine buildings, it's difficult to image five better destinations than Bologna, Ravenna, Padova, Parma and Lucca. There seemed to be breathtaking experiences round virtually every corner.

Thanks to an earlier lecture on the mosaics of Ravenna, we had valuable information pre-tour. However, no words could do justice to the treasures of this city, once the capital of Rome's western empire and one of the great locations of Byzantine art in Europe. We gasped at the overwhelming beauty and intricacies of the mosaics of St Vitale and the Mausoleo di Galla Placida.

Before leaving the area, some of the party visited Dante's burial place or simply relaxed, trying to digest the wonders of the mosaics before

La spesa legge

CHIUSURA ANTICIPATA CAUSA TERREMOTO

Left, part of the Fylde DFAS group (with our guide Anna at the centre rear with the purple flower) in Bologna; right, one of Ravenna's ravishing frescoes; below left, sign of the times in a Bolognese shop window; below right, a cleric and his dog check for structural damage after the earthquake

Focus on Italy And yes, the earth did move

brought a change in the programme, as several of the buildings due to be visited were closed. Luckily for us, our proud Bolognese guide Anna wasn't going to be put off by these inconveniences and quickly constructed another itinerary which included the Basilica of San Stefano and the ancient university's Anatomical Theatre.

By Day 4 in Padova we were running out of superlatives to describe what we saw, especially after a visit to Giotto's masterwork, his frescos in the Capella degli Scrovegni, and a stroll across the truly spectacular Prato della Valle, which is surely the biggest and Europe.

And so on to Parma, which has produced far more than its famous ham and parmigiano reggiano cheese. Among a treasure trove of paintings, sculptures and fine medieval buildings, a favourite for many of the group was the Teatro Farnese, which has been carefully restored after bomb damage in the second world war and is considered to be the first permanent proscenium arch theatre.

Before flying home, we headed for Lucca, Puccini's birthplace and a charming town boasting 16th century ramparts and fine Romanesque churches.

Several members sketched some of the wonders we saw and maybe the completed artworks will be shown at a future meeting - so much more satisfying than the usual holiday snaps! Meanwhile excellent photographs can be found on line at flickr.com/photos/fyldedfas/ Jennifer Williamson

perhaps the most beautiful square in How to see Florence without tears or tourists

Fancy a trip to Florence but can't bear the thought of all those other tourists? Want to stroll round an empty Uffizi Gallery without booking a time-slot so you can marvel, alone, in front of Botticelli's Birth of Venus?

This is not the impossible dream you might expect, but sadly you can only do it once a year - by visiting this most crowded of tourist hotspots over Christmas.

My family did it a few years ago and it worked a treat. In fact, if you long for a Christmas away from home, Florence is arguably the perfect destination.

visiting the beautifully decorated 6th century church of Sant' Apollinare in wobble, or more accurately a devastating earthquake, which registered almost six on the Richter Scale and caused great damage and loss of life in towns and villages further north. Unfortunately this

Our day in Bologna started with a nearby Classe.

You can fly from Manchester fairly cheaply right to the edge of the city after a brief stop in Germany; you can book a fancy central hotel at a bargain rate because the only other visitors will be a few Japanese and Chinese tourists; and, I almost guarantee, you really should find an empty Uffizi Gallery around 4pm on Christmas Eve.

A Boxing Day surprise: statue in the Boboli Gardens

On Christmas Day you can enjoy a lunchtime snack out in the city, as some bars and cafes never close. And then you can retire to your own hotel for something fancy to eat later in the day without paying the silly prices

you would expect for a festive meal away from home in Come Boxing Day the city will become packed once more. But this is a different crowd from the one you might imagine. It's all the Florentines coming into town or strolling through the Boboli Gardens to reclaim and enjoy their heritage on the one day they know they can. For them, it's a truly exhilarating experience.

If you wish to linger longer in the area once hotel prices start to rise and New Year approaches, you might consider transferring to cheaper and perhaps more peaceful accommodation a short bus ride away in Fiesole, a charming little hill town overlooking Florence with Etruscan roots and Roman ruins. Here you should find good value bed and breakfast deals.

Volunteers take Fylde DFAS

Church Recording nears conclusion

Our March Newsletter included an article written by Ann Bullick, who is an active member of our Fylde DFAS Church Recording Group. She gave an interesting account of how NADFAS Church Recording started about 40 years ago and how we came to adopt the United Reformed Church, known as the White Church in Fairhaven, as our first project.

Our five sub-groups have been busy in the past few months and a lot of work has been undertaken. The textile and woodwork groups have completed their research and the metalwork group is nearing the end. I am drawing a plan of the Church and then the only outstanding work to be done is on the library, history and stained glass.

The group has participated in Tuition & Training Days led by the NADFAS NW Area Coordinator. These have proved both enjoyable and invaluable and as the time for presenting the information approaches, I arranged for a group of Church Recorders from Bolton DFAS to meet our group in August to advise on the best ways to do this.

The Record which will be published is really a book which contains information recorded in a church at a certain time and does not contain any narrative content or subjective commentary on the items. Five copies of this will be produced — one for the church, one to the local archives for research and the others for NADFAS House to forward to the V&A Art Library, Church Buildings Council Library and to the National Record Centre. This last archive houses all the English Heritage documents and maps plus the National Trust Records, so our Record will be kept in good company.

We are grateful to the White Church for providing very welcome cups of tea. We still have a lot of work to complete on the White Church and then we will be discussing possible new projects. Anyone interested in volunteering should contact me. Lack of experience is not a problem as training and support are provided and members of all religious denominations, or of none, are welcome. Philip Bailey

Volunteering: Your questions answered

Our Society needs more volunteers and getting involved provides opportunities to meet new friends with similar interests and learn new skills. Our volunteers are friendly, supportive and enthusiastic so do give serious thought to joining us. Meetings are enjoyable social events.

Ouestion: Who are the volunteers? Answer: Volunteering is a way in which NADFAS members bring their experiences to the broader community by involvement in Church Recording, Heritage Volunteering and Young Arts projects.

O: Why are Societies involved? A: Many members want to ensure our cultural and artistic heritage is preserved. They are enthusiastic. want to have fun, learn new things and make a difference.

O. What do they do? A. Heritage Volunteers help to preserve our national heritage by archiving, stewarding and conserving, for example, books and textiles in museums, galleries, National Trust properties, historic houses and libraries. Fylde DFAS is currently involved with other Societies in a needlework project to produce a kneeler for Stonyhurst College Chapel. In the future we are hoping to submit a Heritage Lottery Bid with the Friends of the Lytham St. Annes Art Collection to research, photograph and catalogue it. Funding will be needed for training volunteers to learn how to handle the paintings, access public records and publish the catalogue. Church Recorders participate in recording the details of the internal fabric and furnishings of churches — see the report alongside. Young Arts Projects help ensure the future of the arts by raising enthusiasm among the next generation of artists and art enthusiasts. The range of art-based projects varies; some create a new insight based on first hand experience — for example appreciation of an artist's work or a visit to a gallery. For some children there might be opportunity to take responsibility for new tasks and skills. Two new national awards, the Discover Arts Award and the Explore Arts Award, were introduced in April. Fylde DFAS has supported a talented young Fleetwood paper sculptor and provided a photographic assignment for a student at Blackpool and the Fylde College. Last year we organised a competition for local primary schools, Mr. Lowry in Lytham St Annes. More recently we led a community art project to coincide with the Open Golf — see article on page 1.

O. How do I get involved? A. As a member of Fylde DFAS you are welcome to participate in any of our volunteering arms. Simply contact our coordinators, Philip Bailey and Angela Brown, whose e-mails are on the programme card or talk to them either before or after our lectures. O. Will someone tell me what to

A. Training is provided as necessary, often with professional conservators, advisors and

O. Will I be expected to work at home on my own?

to heart of our community...

A. Sometimes depending on the type of work. For example our Church Recorders work in subgroups — textiles and stained glass are two examples.

Q. How often will we meet? A. This varies depending on the type of work and the stage it's at. Our Church Recorders meet monthly. The tapestry volunteers meet weekly on alternate Mondays and Wednesday, 10am to noon. Marion Nuttall

Birdies fly in for Open Golf

Continued from page 1

work with artist Rebecca Chesney and the RSPB Ribble Discovery Centre at Fairhaven Lake to create a sound installation. Groups of volunteers went to various locations to record bird calls and song, which Rebecca then mixed to create a digital soundtrack, overlaid with familiar St Annes sounds such as a train going by, the noise of a bowls match and sounds of the sea. The resulting soundscape was played at various locations round the town, surprising customers and bringing the sound of birdsong into unexpected places.

Artists Chris Culshaw and Boz Phillips worked with Home Start Fylde to deliver an owl project, which saw the children create owl costumes and whole families getting involved in compiling photographic records of the workshops. Each child created a We can Fly book containing images, poems and stories created during the project. A We Can Fly exhibition was mounted in St Annes Library and the children and families received their books at the Library Garden Party in July.

For our project with the Friends of St Annes Library (FoSAL), we commissioned mosaic artist Patricia Lee, who has created a number of birds and other exotic creatures for schools, hospitals and community groups across the North West. We ran a number of workshops for both children and adults at St Annes Library. Participants were invited to decorate perspex birds and also to provide a name and a story for their birdies.

One of the glass fusion birdies on show at the Bedford Hotel, St Annes

These artworks were to provide inspiration for Patricia to create a unique bird for St Annes Library garden. The winning birdie design was Birdsworth who is, very appropriately for a library, a literary bird. Birdsworth was formally unveiled by Fylde DFAS Chair Hilary Alcock at FoSAL's Garden Party in July. He is situated by the storyteller's pergola and is already much loved by the children who visit the library and its garden.

The rest of the library perspex birds were displayed in various locations throughout the summer, including the cinema at Pleasure Island and various cafés and shops. The template proved to be very popular and was also used for a number of birdie workshops with groups of Rainbows and Brownies in St Annes. These birdies, together with a large number of owls created by Heyhouses Infants schoolchildren, have spent the summer decorating the guide hut in Leach Lane.

One of the most rewarding features of the project has been the community groups we have worked with. Often adults will say that they 'can't do art' when what they really mean is that they have little opportunity to attempt it. Provide them with the right materials and they're away! The Friendly Gym in Lytham created lots of glamorous birdies from seguins and feathers. You may have noticed them on show in Sainsbury's, St Annes. Gym members also made some Olympic birds which were used to greet the torch bearers as they ran through St Annes early one morning in July.

A number of glass fusion workshops, held at the Bedford Hotel, proved to be very popular and resulted in some very professional looking pieces of art. St Thomas's Church made a flock of lovely doves which decorated the trees outside and which were seen by visitors walking to the Open Golf.

To attract and maintain the public's interest in the project, the team needed to use the media to our best advantage. A website was created (itsabirdie.com) as well as a Facebook page. We Tweeted, we compiled items for the local press and we spoke on Radio Lancashire. We also created a dedicated leaflet for residents and visitors telling them about the project.

Overall, nearly 600 people took part in the project and by the time of the Championship, St Annes was displaying birds in all sorts of venues. As a team we have learned a great deal; the next project will be easier — but not until we have all enjoyed a well earned rest! Some of our birdies, together with other pieces of avian art, were on display at the Fly Away Birdie exhibition at the Fylde Gallery in September. I hope you saw them before they Pam Foster migrated!

In the Picture Page 8

Bowes Museum guides really made our day!

What a splendid place Bowes Museum is! Built in the style of a French chateau, it is a most striking piece of architecture set in a truly imposing location very close to the small town of Barnard Castle in County Durham.

The museum was created by the imaginative, visionary and enterprising John and Josephine Bowes. The foundation stone was laid by Josephine in 1869 but sadly she died before it was finished. John lived to see the completion of the building works but died in 1885, leaving trustees to end the project. The museum finally opened in 1892.

The museum, which Fylde DFAS visited in June, is home to both permanent collections and visiting exhibitions. Many of the permanent collections were amassed by John and Josephine and include a world renowned collection of ceramics, paintings, sculptures and objets d'art. The most well known of these is an automaton, the silver swan, which we all gathered to watch at two o'clock precisely as it caught a fish from the river. Over the years a Trust, followed by the formation of the Friends of the Bowes Museum and now a new charitable Trust established in the millennium, has maintained the building and administered the collections as well as purchasing new items for display.

Like a French chateau -Bowes Museum

There were several visiting exhibitions on display while we were there including a fashion exhibition, photography and a hat display. However I must admit that some of us did choose to spend some time in Barnard Castle, which is an interesting and well planned small town. It has wide, spacious streets and a number of small, interesting galleries and boutiquestyle shops.

Last but not least I must mention the excellent lunch we had at the museum and thank all the volunteer guides who gave us a most interesting talk and guided us round a number of the galleries. They made our day!

Susan Cornah

Letter from our Chair

Continued from page 1 about them and the Special Interest Days. We also offer social events such as the Afternoon Tea with Josiah Wedgwood in November and the Christmas Lunch, as well as bespoke cultural tours, both abroad and in the UK, and exciting excursions to exhibitions, theatres and places of interest.

The programme for the 2012/13 season looks very entertaining and full of variety and we hope that you will participate fully. We are very inclusive and there is plenty of opportunity to make new friends and engage in activities in the company of people with similar interests.

However we are also a Society with not just a heartbeat but a social conscience; we have a strong desire to give something back. We therefore aim to offer grassroots support to the arts and heritage world through our volunteering groups. In the coming year, although we know how busy you are, we would love to see more of our membership getting involved.

There are three main groups of Volunteers: Heritage Volunteers who are involved in a tapestry project under the guidance of Helen Montgomery; Church Recorders who are completing a record of the fabric and furnishings of the White Church so that future generations have access to an archive of material about it; and Young Arts which helps to get young people and members of the community involved in creative projects, competitions, exhibitions etc and, where appropriate, provides funding support to young artists.

There is also a possibility of a new heritage project coming on stream for those of you who are not stitchers, depending on achieving Heritage Lottery funding; more of that I hope in the next Newsletter. Finally can I encourage you to make good use of our marvellously comprehensive website which continues to be very up to date, informative and interesting.

There has been some research on the new Society ap that was developed towards the end of last year and that is generating plenty of traffic from visitors to the site, particularly as the ownership of iPads increases. If you do not have a computer, public libraries are very helpful in helping you to gain access to the website.

Please raise a glass to a really great fourth season for Fylde DFAS! Hilary Alcock