Northern Lights

Scandinavian design in the mid-20th Century

The beginning of the new millennium has witnessed a growing taste for clean lines and lack of clutter which has stimulated interest in 20th century design.

With many of us visiting Ikea on a regular basis, the influence of the great Scandinavian designers of the mid-20th century has had more of an impact on contemporary design than many people realise.

Some of the most important designers whose influence remains extraordinarily strong were Scandinavian, such as Alvar Aalto and Tapio Wirkkala in Finland, Henning Koppel, working for Georg Jensen, and Arne Jacobsen in Denmark, or Orrefors glass in Sweden. These were designers and makers of the new 'antiques', pushing the boundaries in the use of design and materials and with a continuing legacy.

Deborah Lambert

Deborah Lambert is a freelance art historian and lecturer.

After reading for an MA in the History of Art at the Courtauld Institute, London University, she became an arts administrator. In 1978 she joined Christie's Education, part of Christie's Auctioneers, as tutor, lecturer and academic director teaching fine and decorative art history. From 2006 until stepping down in 2015, Deborah was Curator of the Schroder Collection, an important private art collection, and now concentrates on her freelance lecturing and research.

Deborah has lectured for a variety of organisations in the United Kingdom, America and Canada, and for 23 years appeared on BBC Television's Antiques Roadshow as a furniture specialist.
